Six or eight cars wer derailed and three of them completely wrecked. Of these three cars two were loaded with hogs, about half of which were killed, and one with wheat. The two cars of hogs were well toward the head of the train and the car of wheat was next to them. It is supposed that the wreck was caused by the breaking of a flange on one of the wheels on the first car of hogs. This allowed the trucks to get off the track and, from the marks on the ties, it seemed that the car had run over the ties for quite a distance. She smash-up occurred while the train was passing over a small culvert, which was that some of the ties in the culvert were broken by the car which was off the track, and this break threw off the cars which followed.

The spot where the cars were piled up was several yards beyond the bridge There is an embankment on one side and a deep ditch on the other. The first car was left lying in a diagonal position, with the front end jammed into the embank-ment. The second car lay in an almost perpendicular position on the side of the embankment, while the car loaded with wheat was jerked off the trucks and was afterwards dumped into the ditch in order to clear the track. About half the hogs in the two cars were killed or in-fured, and the wheat was pretty well scattered, most of it being in the ditch. The bridge was repaired by replacing the broken ties. It was nearly twelve hours after the wreck occurred that the Kansas City, arrived, and the passengers were transferred and sent to Yates Center, where they made connection with the train from Coffeyville to Kansas City The passengers for Wichita were trans ferred to the train from St. Louis, which arrived here at 2:30 yesterday afternoon only un hour and twenty-five minutes.

In addition to this, there were several freight trains banked up at the stations on each side of the wreck, and traffic on that section of the road was considerably conjected. Train No. 5 is due here at 7:15 a. m., but owing to the delay caused by running back to Yates Center, it did not arrive until 4:30 yesterday aftern
